Physician Consult – Quickly connect for a consultation

Sometimes your doctor is unavailable when you need care now – appointments can be difficult to schedule (especially on short notice), illnesses occur outside of office hours, and travel and waiting can make it very time-consuming. That's one reason why GetHealth is so valuable. Members and their families have unlimited access to U.S. board-certified and state-licensed physicians 24/7/365, via phone or online video consultations^{1,2} through Teladoc.

Sometimes you have a question that doesn't require a face-to-face consultation. Now, with GetHealth, you and your family have convenient access to quality care from home or work with doctors that can resolve many of your medical issues and offer convenient solutions.

Regardless of time or location, members can connect with physicians who use electronic health records, telephone consultations and online video consultations to diagnose conditions, recommend treatment and write prescriptions when medically appropriate. This telemedicine service is an easily accessible complement to your primary care physician. With GetHealth you get the following:

- Information Consultation: If you have a medical question that only a doctor can answer, physicians are available for unlimited general advice and recommendations regarding a range of routine medical conditions.
- Diagnostic Consultations: When you need more than basic medical advice, licensed physicians in your state are available for unlimited diagnostic medical consultations, which provide advice, recommendations and treatment plans, including prescription medication when necessary.
- Electronic Medical Records: A personal health profile that stores your medical history, consultations, doctor's notes and follow-up discussions. The information submitted is secure, confidential and available at any time. This record can also be shared with your primary care physician for continued care³.
- E-Consultation: If you have a medical question that only a doctor can answer or need advice, physicians are available for unlimited email medical consultations regarding a range of routine medical conditions.

You can call when:

- Your child has a stuffy nose and a cough. Is it a cold or allergies?
- After working all day, your back is sore. Should you apply ice or heat?
- Your spouse has recurring acid indigestion. Is it something to worry about?
- You have a question or need a refill of your regular medication (diabetes, blood pressure, etc.).
- Your child wakes in the night with high fever. Should you go to the emergency room?

Terms and Conditions: Teladoc does not replace the primary care physician. Teladoc does not guarantee that a prescription will be written. Teladoc operates subject to state regulation and may not be available in certain states. Teladoc does not prescribe DEA controlled substances, non-therapeutic drugs and certain other drugs which may be harmful because of their potential for abuse. Screening for: Carotid Artery Disease for the Prevention of Stroke

The Life Line ultrasound screening package includes an ultrasound examination of the carotid arteries. This screening detects buildup of fatty plaque, which is the primary cause of stroke, one of the leading causes of permanent disability and death.

Unfortunately, waiting for symptoms to appear can often mean waiting too long as 80% of stroke victims experience no symptoms prior to having one¹. A Carotid Artery Screening can help you prevent stroke because when identified early, 4 out of 5 strokes can be thwarted².

The Carotid Artery/Stroke screening procedure is simple, painless, and non-invasive. After applying gel to your neck a technologist will move an instrument, called a transducer, on your neck to create images of the carotid arteries and assess the rate of blood flow within them.

Screening for: Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm - a silent killer

Life Line also includes an ultrasound examination of the abdominal aorta. This screening helps to detect aneurysms that can cause a ruptured aortic artery. A dilatation, or ballooning, of the abdominal aorta is the most common form of aortic aneurysm. Abdominal aortic aneurysms are likely to tear if they reach 5 centimeters or greater in diameter. This screening can help detect the aneurysm before it reaches that critical size.

Occasionally problems with the abdominal aorta can cause pain in the abdomen or back, but unfortunately, in most cases, abdominal aortic aneurysms tend to cause no symptoms at all until it is too late. When ruptured the result is life threatening because of the internal blood loss. That is why a screening specifically in this region of the abdomen is so important.

Life Line uses ultrasound technology to measure the size of your abdominal aorta. The process is painless. You lie on your back on an exam table while a technologist applies gel to your abdomen. The technologist then takes images and measurements of your aorta by moving an instrument, called a transducer, across your abdomen.

Screening for: Atrial Fibrillation to help Prevent Strokes and Heart-Related Deaths

Atrial Fibrillation is also known as irregular heartbeat. Atrial Fibrillation is the most common type of heart arrhythmia. If you have the condition, your risk of heart-related death doubles and you have five times greater risk of having a stroke³. A heartbeat irregularity may have no symptoms, but it is often associated with palpitations, fainting, chest pain and even congestive heart failure.

Life Line screens for atrial fibrillation using EKG electrodes, which are placed on the arms and legs to detect irregular heart rhythm. The EKG identifies the presence or absence of an atrial fibrillation at the time of the screening. This is a painless and simple screening. You roll up your sleeves and roll down your socks, then lie on an exam table while a technologist applies electrodes above your wrists and ankles.

³ American Heart Association, Heart Disease and Stroke Statistics – 2012 Update

Screening for: Peripheral Arterial Disease

Peripheral arterial disease (PAD) is a disorder that occurs in the arteries that carry blood to the arms and legs. PAD can cause severe leg pain and disability. An individual with PAD has twice the risk for coronary artery disease⁴. A PAD health screen can detect arterial plaque buildup in the lower extremities. PAD can build up over a lifetime and affects about 8 million Americans.

The Life Line screening is done using the ankle-brachial index (ABI). The ABI measures the ratio between the pressure in your arms and that in your legs. This ratio indicates how well blood flows to the legs. A ratio of less than 0.90 indicates plaque buildup and possible peripheral arterial disease. A ratio of 0.90 or greater is considered normal. For many people, the outward symptoms will not appear until the artery has narrowed by 60 percent or more.

The ABI screening is painless, quick, and non-invasive. After removing your socks and shoes, you will have pressure cuffs placed around your upper arms and ankles. A small ultrasound device then measures the systolic blood pressures in your limbs helping to identify most cases of peripheral arterial disease.
